

CLAUSE

- A group of words consisting of a subject and a predicate, and forms a sentence or part of a sentence. There are two kinds of clauses:
- Dependent Clause
- A dependent clause is a group of words that contains a subject and verb but does not express a complete thought. A dependent clause cannot be a sentence. Often a dependent clause is marked by a dependent marker word. Example
- When Jim studied in the Sweet Shop for his chemistry quiz

- Independent Clause
- An independent clause is a group of words that contains a subject and verb and expresses a complete thought. An independent clause is a sentence.
- Jim studied in the Sweet Shop for his chemistry quiz.

- SUBJECT: A noun, noun phrase or pronoun representing the person or thing that performs the action of the verb, about which something is stated.
- PREDICATE: A part of a sentence containing a verb that makes a statement about the subject of the verb.

SENTENCE

- A set of words expressing a statement, a question or an order, containing a subject and a predicate.
- A set of words complete in itself as the expression of a thought, containing or implying a subject and predicate, and conveying a statement, question, exclamation or command.

KINDS OF SENTENCE

- There are four kinds of sentences from structural point of view: simple, compound, complex, and compound complex
- Simple Sentence: A simple sentence contains only one independent clause.
- The doctor examined the patient.

- Compound Sentence: A compound or 'double' sentence consists of at least two simple sentences.
- The rain started, so the officials cancelled the game.
- Complex Sentence: A sentence containing one independent clause and at least one subordinate clause is called complex sentence.
- Because I forgot the time, I missed the final exam.

- Compound-Complex Sentence: A compound-complex sentence consists of at least two independent clauses and one dependent clause.
- Mary went to work. John went to the party. I went home. →
- Mary went to work, but John went to the party, and I went home.