Character Improvement Theory

Stephen R . covey

Author of the 7(seven)

Habits of Highly effective people

According to Stephen R. Covey

- Be Proactive

- Proactivity has a lot to do with a person's "circle of influence".
- What you can control, what you can influence and what is out of your reach.
- Proactivity is strongly related to acknowledging your own responsibility and influence.
- The first big step that has to be taken is the step from dependence to independence.

2. Begin with the end in Mind

- This is the habit of vision, objectives, and mission.
- Beginning with the end in mind means that when you make decisions today you consistently take into consideration what you stand for 'in general'.
- You determine what you find important in life, what you stand for, what you want to accomplish.

3. Put first things first

- This habit has to do with integrity, discipline, sticking to your agreements.
- What is life about, and how do you wish to shape your own life? Knowing this, you will get to work pro-actively while setting the right priorities.
- The second big step is that of independence to (self-selected) interdependence.

4. Think win-win

- This is the habit of the Paradox.
- Temptation is strong to think in terms of winning OR losing- or wanting to be right.
- The trick is to recognize that a paradox provides an opportunity to unite the poles.
- You can accomplish this by thinking in terms of win-win. In case of conflicts you will always search for solutions that are fair to all parties and in which there are no losers.

5. Seek first to understand then to be understood

- Concentrate first on understanding the other person and then put energy into being understood.

6. Synergize

- The sixth habit of the seven habits of highly effective people, that is required to achieve interdependence is synergizing.
- This means that your approach is fundamentally based on respect, cooperation and trust.
- This is the habit of strengthening.
- The objective is to find the third path: how can two paradoxes be combined into something better?

7. Sharpen the saw

- The last habit is maintenance which tells you about improving yourself and perseverance.
- By taking plenty of exercise, rest, meditation, etcetera, you will keep your body, mind, relationships and spirituality in balance.
