Harassment

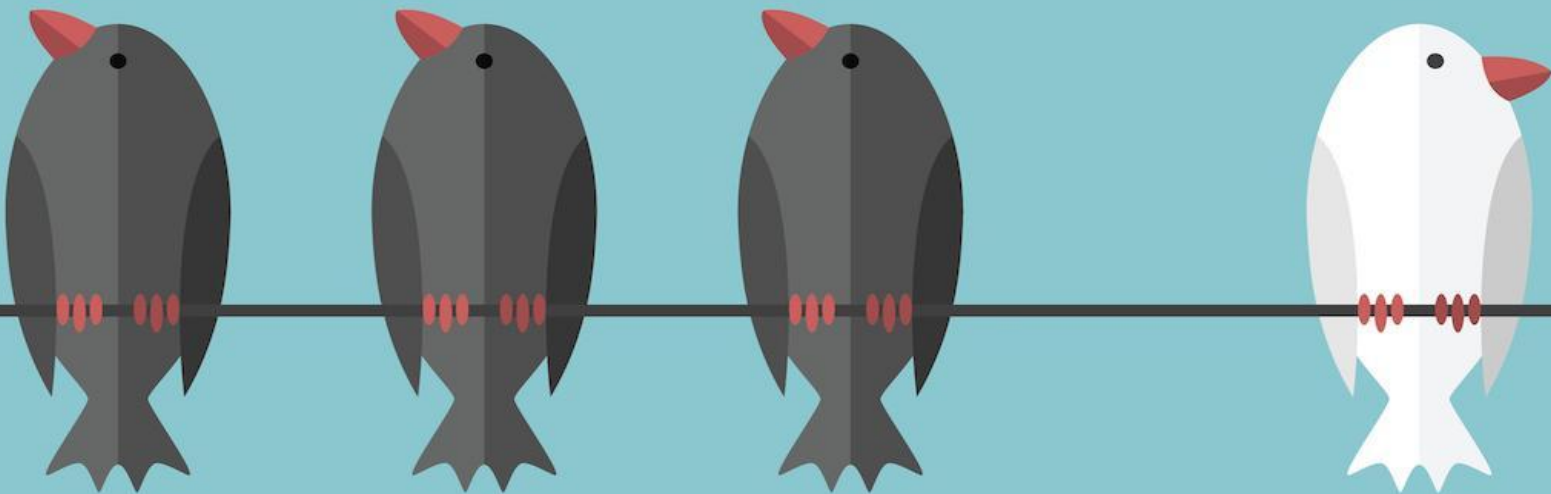

- ▶ Behavior that annoys or upsets someone
- ▶ The act or an instance of irritating, disturbing, annoying, or troubling repeatedly

Discriminatory Harassment

- ▶ All unlawful workplace harassment is discriminatory in nature. But, unlike verbal or physical harassment, discriminatory harassment is defined by its intentions instead of how it's carried out. E.g., Racial, Gender, Religious, Disability, Age-based etc.

Personal Harassment

Personal harassment is a form of workplace harassment that's not based on one of the protected classes (such as race, gender or religion)

In its most basic form and it's not illegal but can be damaging, nevertheless. e.g., Inappropriate or personal comments, Offensive jokes, Ostracizing behaviors, Intimidation tactics etc.

Physical Harassment

Physical harassment, also often called workplace violence, refers to a type of workplace harassment that involves physical attacks or threats. In extreme cases, physical harassment may be classified as assault. E.g., Direct threats, Physical threats, Destroying property etc.

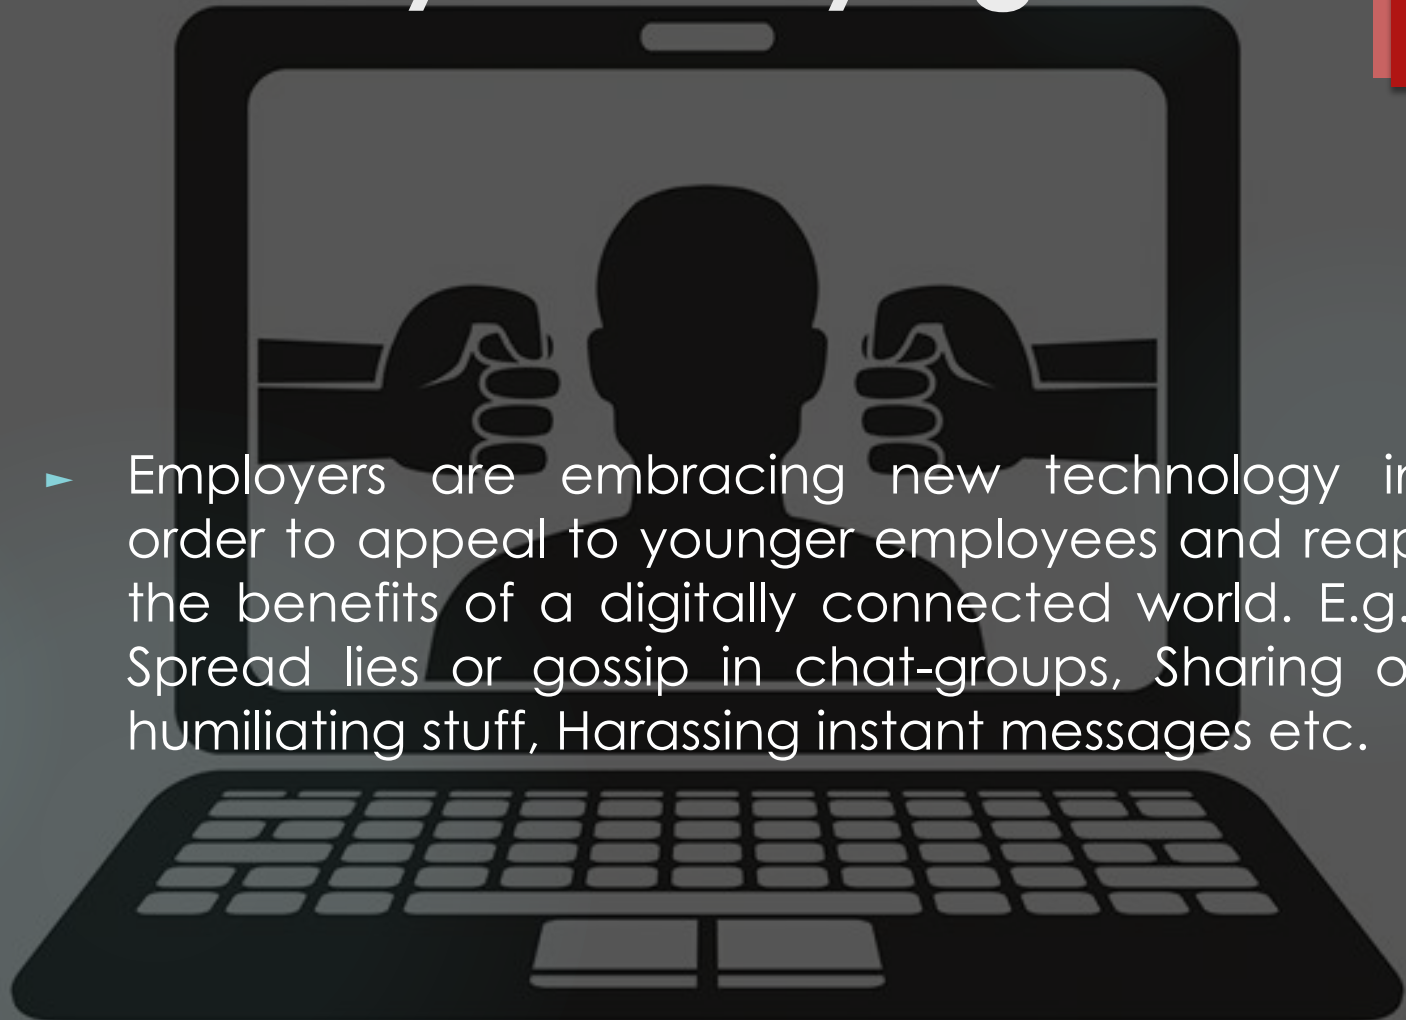

Power Harassment

- ▶ Power harassment is a common form of workplace harassment that's characterized by a power disparity between the harasser and the harassed. E.g., Verbal, Physical, Intrusion into personal life, Blackmailing, Quid Pro Quo, Unfeasible demands regarding work etc.

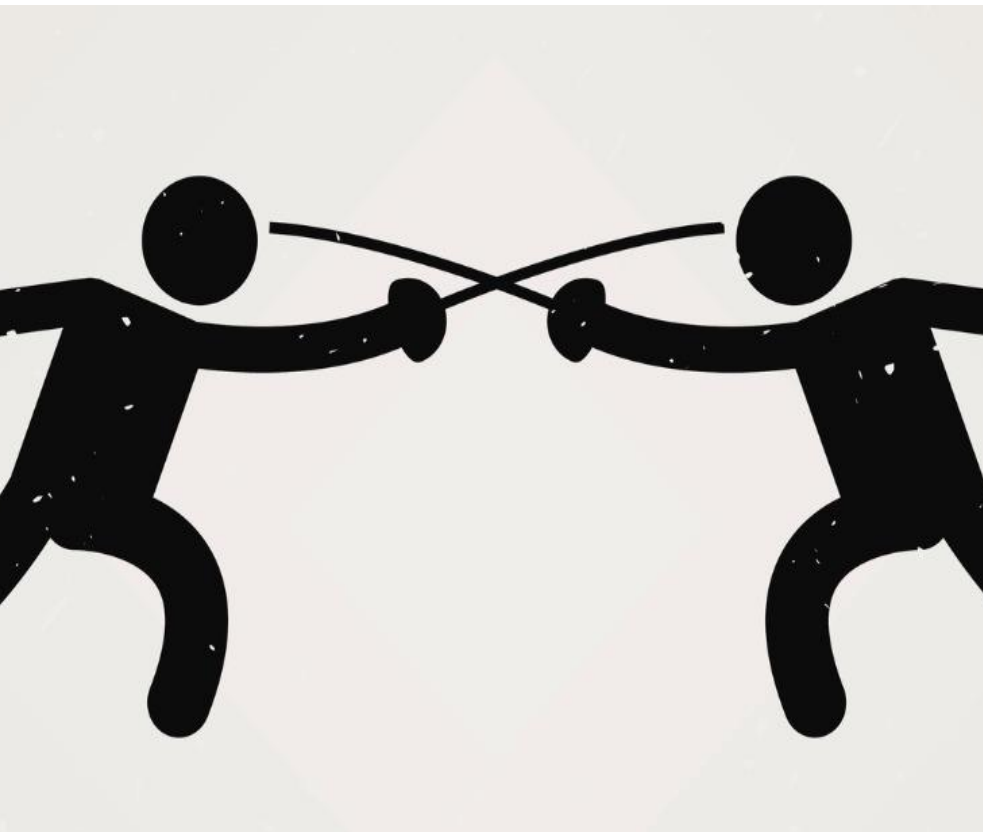

Cyberbullying

- ▶ Employers are embracing new technology in order to appeal to younger employees and reap the benefits of a digitally connected world. E.g., Spread lies or gossip in chat-groups, Sharing of humiliating stuff, Harassing instant messages etc.

Retaliation

Retaliation harassment occurs when a person harasses someone else to get revenge and to prevent the victim from behaving in such a way again.

Employee A files a complaint about Employee B. Employee B finds out about the complaint and who made it.

Employee B harasses Employee A to get revenge and deter them from filing further complaints.

Third Party Harassment

Third-party harassment is a type of workplace harassment that's perpetrated by a "third party" – someone from outside of the organization

Instead of the perpetrator being a boss, supervisor or colleague, he or she is a vendor, supplier, customer or client of the company

Verbal Harassment

- ▶ Verbal harassment can be the result of personality conflicts in the workplace that have escalated beyond the casual eye roll or something more serious. E.g., Threatening, Yelling, Insulting etc.

Story about Streaming Giant

The background of the slide features a large, dark rectangular area that resembles a television screen. On this screen, the word "NETFLIX" is displayed in a bold, orange, sans-serif font. To the left of the screen, there is a vertical red bar and a dark, rectangular object that looks like a remote control or a small sign. The overall lighting is dim, with the red bar and the screen's content providing the primary visual elements.

NETFLIX

- ▶ Netflix introduced FIVE SECOND staring rule in 2018

- ▶ Netflix employees reportedly are forbidden to look at each other for longer than five seconds under a strict new anti-harassment policy the online streaming service has rolled out

THANK YOU.....
