

Use of HEADINGS

Lecture # 02(B)

Report Design

- The basic design items that writers use are
 - ▶ Headings
 - ▶ Chunks
 - ▶ Visual aids
 - ▶ Hyperlinks

What are Headings

- A heading is a short phrase describing what the succeeding section is all about.
- Headings are important, as they help organize the contents of an article
- Headings are important because they help readers identify the main points of each section in the paper.

Style of headings for Article Writing

Common formatting styles for articles include

Modern Language Association (MLA) style,

American Psychological Association (APA) style,

Associated Press (AP) style, and American Sociological Association (ASA) style.

Modern Language Association (MLA) style

- There are 5 levels of heading in MLA Style

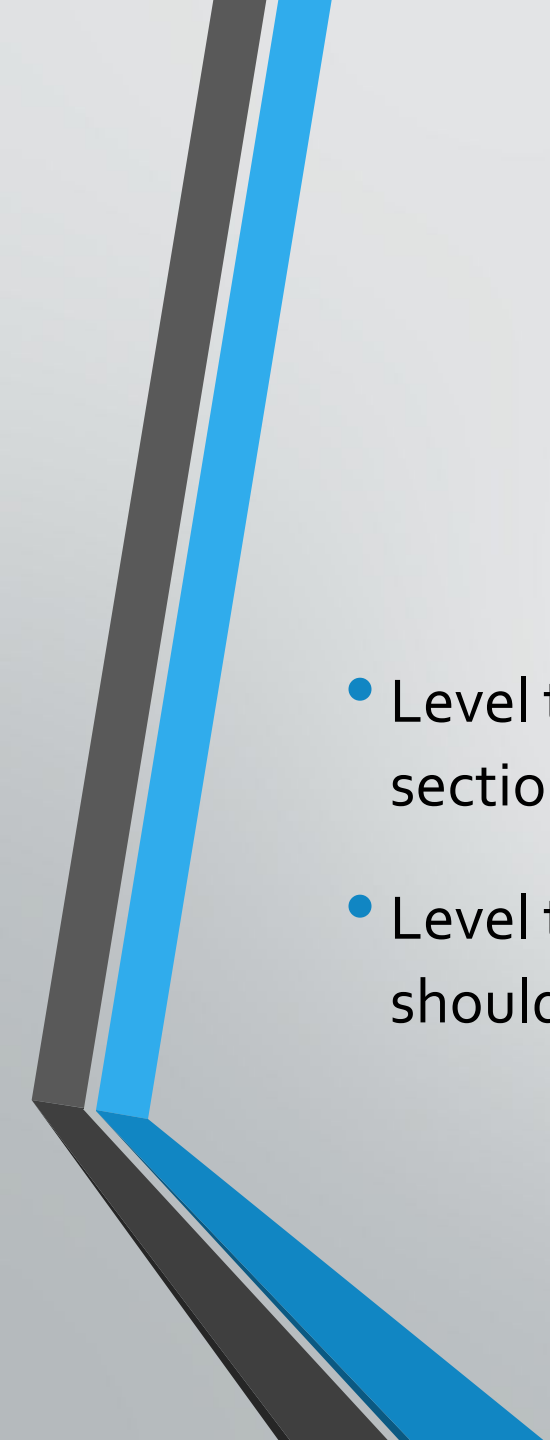

Level 1 Heading

- Include a running head/page header.
- It is a page header, alternately called a running head, at the top of every page of an article.
- Level one headings are written in boldface font, flush left with the margin.

Level 1 Heading

Level 1 Heading- bold, flush left: Level one headings are typically used to title important sections within the paper.

boldface font, flush left with the margin

Level 2 Heading

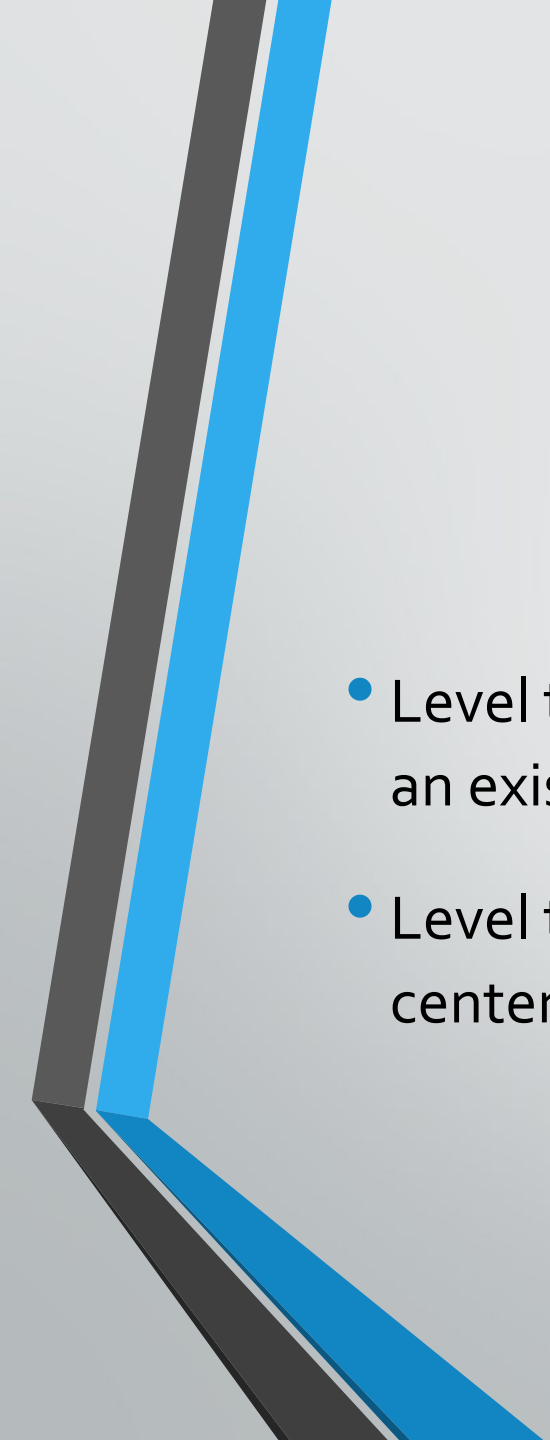

- Level two heads are typically used for subsections within an important section.
- Level two headings are written in italics, without any bold font. The text should be flush left with the margin

Level 2 Heading

Level 1 Heading- bold, flush left: Level one headings are typically used to title important sections within the paper.

Level 2 Heading- italics, flush left : Level two heads are typically used for subsections within an important section.

written in italics, without any bold font. flush left Text with the margin

Level 3 Heading

- Level three headings are frequently used for substantial subsections within an existing subsection.
- Level three headings are written in bold, without italics. The text should be centered within the body of the paper.

Level 3 Heading

Level 1 Heading- bold, flush left: Level one headings are typically used to title important sections within the paper.

Level 2 Heading- italics, flush left : Level two heads are typically used for subsections within an important section.

Level 3 Heading- centered, bold :

written in bold, without italics. The text should be centered within the body of the paper.

Level 4 Heading

- Level four headings are used for substantial subsections within an already divided section.
- In other words, use a level four heading to title a subsection below a level three heading, within the level three heading's subsection.
- Level four headings are written in italics, without any bold font. The text should be centered within the body of the paper

Level 4 Heading

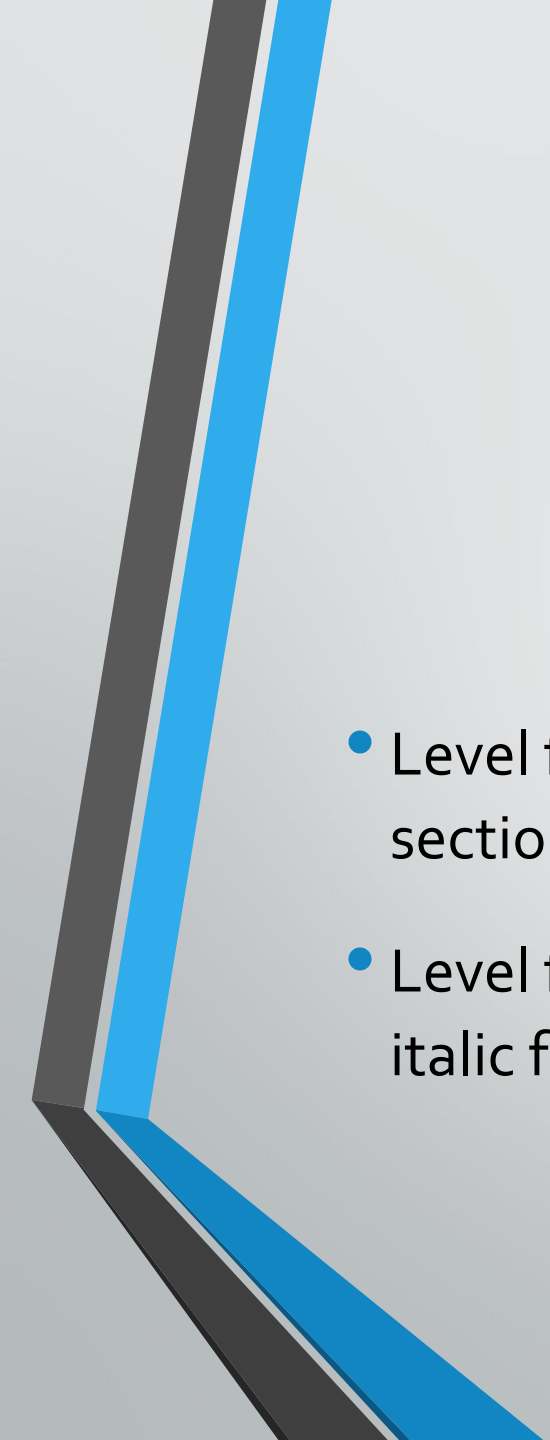

Level 1 Heading- bold, flush left: Level one headings are typically used to title important sections within the paper.

Level 2 Heading- italics, flush left : Level two heads are typically used for subsections within an important section.

Level 3 Heading- centered, bold :

Level 4 Heading: centered, italics

written in italics, without any bold font. The text should be centered within the body of the paper

Level 5 Heading

- Level five headings are used to title a subsection within a highly-divided section.
- Level five headings are written with underlined text, and without any bold or italic font. The text should be flush left with the margin.

Level 5 Heading

Level 1 Heading- bold, flush left: Level one headings are typically used to title important sections within the paper.

Level 2 Heading- italics, flush left : Level two heads are typically used for subsections within an important section.

Level 3 Heading- centered, bold :

Level 4 Heading: centered, italics

Level 5 Heading: underlined, flush left written with underlined text, and without any bold or italic font. The text should be flush left with the margin.

End